Blends and essential oils for use in our manual and electrical fragrance devices and fragrance carriers.

Dear customer,

All of our blends listed below can generally be used in our fragrance devices and fragrance carrier products.

We are pleased to give you an overview and a few tips about their use in the section below:

- You can identify blends that are intended for use in combination with fragrance devices or carriers by the corresponding designation on the respective label. You will find the note "room fragrance" here and suggestions for use on the inside of the label.
- Please always pay close attention to the individual usage and application instructions for the fragrance devices and carriers.
- Viscous pure essential oils such as slum benzoin, myrrh, vetiver and bourbon vetiver may not be used in most fragrance devices!
- Equally, heavily pigmented pure essential oils such as blue chamomile, yarrow and vanilla may not be used in most fragrance devices!
- Even diluted pure essential oils are generally not suitable for fragrance devices because the dilution usually consists of alcohol, a fatty oil or, as in the case of lemon verbena, lemongrass!
- Blends that contain such oils are excluded from this rule because the concentration of the individual oil in a blend is usually low. Please always pay close attention to the maximum number of drops specified for the individual fragrance device.
